What is the grace period for expired tags in texas

There are several steps to register your vehicle with the Texas Department of Motor Vehicles. 1. Have your vehicle inspected at a certified inspection station. 2. Show insurance coverage for the required minimums per person, per accident, and for property damage. 3. Get your vehicle registration and sticker at your local county Tax Assessor Collector office. Learn how to register your vehicle!There are several ways to renew your vehicle registration. Remember, you must have a passing vehicle inspection before you can renew. Online. You can renew your vehicle registration online 90 days before the expiration date or up to six months after the expiration date, if you have not received a citation for expired registration. If you renew online, you'll receive $1.00 discount. There are two online renewal options: Renew with Texas by Texas (TxT). TxT is an official, account-based digital government assistant that provides an even easier, faster, and more secure way for Texans to take care of government services - like vehicle registration renewal. To learn more about TxT and create an account, visit the Texas by Texas page on Texas.gov. Complete the Vehicle Registration Renewal application. If you don't want to create a TxT account, you can still use this online option to renew. Mail. Send the renewal notice, a copy of your Vehicle Inspection Report (VIR), proof of current liability insurance, and all fees to your county Tax Assessor-Collector office. In-person. Take your registration renewal notice and proof of current liability insurance to your county's Tax Assessor-Collector office or an approved substation. Renew your registration online with TxT!Vehicle registration fees vary based on the type and weight of the vehicle you're registering. View Texas vehicle registration feesIf you're a new Texas resident, you have 30 days to register your vehicle. Register your vehicle in TexasCounty Tax Assessor-Collector offices handle most vehicle title and registration services on behalf of TxDMV. These services include: Registration renewals (license plates and registration stickers). Vehicle title transfers. Change of address on motor vehicle records. Non-fee license plates such as Purple Heart and Disabled Veterans license plates. Disabled parking placards. Copies of registration receipts. Temporary registration. The temporary waiver covering initial vehicle registration, vehicle registration renewal, vehicle titling, renewal of permanent disabled parking placards and 30-day temporary permits will end April 14. (Hannah Zedaker/Community Impact Newspaper) The temporary waiver covering initial vehicle registration, vehicle registration renewal, vehicle titling, renewal of permanent disabled parking placards and 30-day temporary permits will end April 14. (Hannah Zedaker/Community Impact Newspaper) Officials with the Texas Department of Motor Vehicles announced April 5 there will be no grace period following the end of the temporary waiver of certain vehicle title and registration requirements this month.As previously reported by Community Impact Newspaper, the temporary waiver covering initial vehicle registration, vehicle registration renewal, vehicle titling, renewal of permanent disabled parking placards and 30-day temporary permits will end April 14. The temporary waiver was first implemented by Gov. Greg Abbott on March 16, 2020, and has since been extended several times throughout the ongoing coronavirus pandemic. According to the April 5 news release, Texans will need to complete any overdue transactions prior to 11:59 p.m. on April 14 to avoid being penalized for expired vehicle registrations."After April 14, 2021, law enforcement may begin issuing citations to motorists operating a vehicle without a current registration sticker or current registration receipt. There is no grace period after the April 14, 2021 deadline," the release reads.As a reminder, Texans will need to obtain a passing vehicle inspection prior to renewing vehicle registrations. Vehicle registrations can be renewed online, by mail or in person. Something went wrong. Wait a moment and try again. 500 400 300 200 100 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 Your peaceful Sunday lunch at a countryside Texas restaurant suddenly turns very costly when you find a state trooper standing next to your car in the parking lot. Your car's registration clearly shows an expired date. In fact, it's more than 90 days past its "sell-by" date, the trooper points out as he writes a ticket for "driving with an expired vehicle registration." Whether it's your vintage auto or the car you left while deployed overseas, register it before you take it further than your driveway. The state of Texas has a vehicle registration grace period, but it's a matter of days and months, not years. Read More: How Much is an Expired Registration Ticket? If a motorist hasn't received any citations, they can renew online, by mail or in person any time up to 90 days past the renewal date. If they have received a citation, Texans must renew in person and pay an additional renewal fee. Stuck to the lower front of your windshield on the driver's side, the Texas state automobile registration decal tells a lot about your car and where it's domiciled. The largest numbers range from 1 to 12 and indicate the month your registration expires, which means the registration expires on the last day of that month. Below that number is the name of the county in which the car is registered. Adjacent is the year it expires. Additional information on that little sticker includes your license plate number and a partial vehicle identification number, or VIN. Because VIN numbers are exceptionally long, the entire number isn't printed. Because all cars must pass a mandatory yearly inspection, that a currently registered car displays a current registration also indicates the car has either passed inspection or an inspection is pending. The state registration database reveals those details. Read More: Can I Register My Car With a Suspended Texas Driver's License? Perhaps you missed the reminder that the State of Texas sent you that it was time to renew your auto registration; they mail a registration renewal notice 90 days before the registration expiration date. You find yourself driving your car, and you suddenly realize that you're 60 days overdue. If you haven't received any citations, you can renew online, by mail or in person any time up to 90 days past the renewal date. If you have received a citation, you must renew in person and pay an additional renewal fee. The state allows a five-day grace period after the registration expires without issuing a penalty fee. Even though you are registering the car late, your next renewal month is 12 months from the original expiration. Consequently, you may be renewing three months into the next period, but in nine months, your registration expires, and the process begins anew. If you have an old jalopy sitting in the barn or a car that hasn't been roadworthy for several years, register it before driving it on the streets. Do this in person at the local tax office. Be sure you have the required paperwork before applying. The State of Texas maintains mountains of details regarding your car, the vehicle title, and its history of insurance and inspections. Before renewing an expired registration, be sure you have proof of the car's current insurance. You'll also need to have it inspected, which is a yearly requirement. A small fee is charged by the inspection station, and an additional fee is tacked on when you register. Some counties with high levels of poor air quality may require an emissions test. Check with your county to see if the test is required before renewing your registration. This test can be performed at most inspection stations. If you register your car online, your inspection results are sent electronically to the state, but keep a copy and bring it with you in case it's lost in cyberspace. The more paperwork you bring with you, the easier the process. Texas authorizes some grocery stores to issue registration renewals, but not all accept inspection reports from county subcontractors. You can avoid complications by going to a government outlet to renew. It's a tricky maneuver when you drive your car with its long overdue registration to get inspected. Find an inspection station as close to your home as possible by visiting the Texas State Department of Safety's website. Then drive cautiously, with no side trips. If you are stopped by law enforcement, assure the police officer that you are on your way to get the car inspected so you can register it. Offer to let him follow you if there's any doubt. In some instances, you are in Texas, but your car isn't. Or, you may be attending school out of state, and your car is with you on campus. You can still renew your Texas registration online, by mail or in person without the inspection. On the application, you'll have to certify that the car is out of state. The state notes on your car's record that the inspection is pending its return to Texas. When the car returns to Texas, you'll have three days to get it inspected. The report is sent to the state and entered into the car's record, which takes up to two days. In the meantime, keep a copy of the inspection report in case you are stopped. Go to your county tax office and supply proof of the inspection and then pay the state's portion of the inspection fee. Verify that all the details of the inspection are entered into the state database. The State of Texas sets the fee structure for motor vehicle registration, and individual counties also add registration fees that contribute to their road construction and maintenance funds. When applying for a registration after the due date, expect to pay late fees. If you are stopped for driving with an expired registration, you'll not only receive a citation, but your penalty can add up to several hundred dollars. The fact that you've received a citation eliminates the possibility of online renewal. An in-person visit to your local county tax office is required to renew your expired registration. Numerous military installations are found throughout Texas, which means lots of personnel and their vehicles. Most trainees do not bring their cars, but permanent military and their spouses do. The Texas Department of Motor Vehicles (TxDMV) has special guidelines for military personnel automobile registration. If you are stationed in Texas and make it your home, all cars should be registered in the state. However, if you are living in Texas temporarily, you can maintain your car's current out-of-state registration. Be sure that the registration remains current. Active duty military who are deployed out of state or in another country can re-register their car and self-certify for the inspection, but they must have the automobile inspected immediately upon return or face penalties. Register online or by mail to avoid the car becoming expired. Military service members and their spouses can receive waivers on fees for licensing, title and insurance transfers if they wish to register their car in the state. If you are serving overseas and your automobile is garaged and not being used, you are still responsible for maintaining its registration. An expired registration, even for military personnel, has consequences, but they may not be as costly. Read More: What Is a Texas Exempt License Plate?
